

Dear friends and colleagues,

On the eve of one of the most beloved and joyful holidays of the year, I would like to remember and thank all those who took part in the preparation of the issues of the Siberian Journal of Oncology in 2022. Undoubtedly, the success of the journal is the result of the fruitful work of the authors, reviewers, and the editorial board. The secret of the success and high popularity is the ability to identify hot topics and present the results of scientific research.

The journal's mission is to provide the scientific community with information about innovative technologies and breakthrough research in fundamental and clinical medicine. We try to accumulate all the latest achievements in the field of oncology and make them available to scientists and practitioners.

It should be noted that we continue to rely on the quality of our publications, expanding the pool of reviewers for a more thorough and rigorous selection of articles. Thanks to the efforts of such a large team, the Siberian Journal of Oncology occupies a leading position among modern medical publications in covering problems in the field of oncology. Our plans are not to rest on our laurels, to achieve further success, to expand the range of new interesting topics and talented authors.

New responsible tasks lie ahead of us. I am sure that together we will achieve even more significant results.

May peace, love and the warmth of the hearth reign in your homes, and the wishes made on New Year's Eve will certainly come true!

With best wishes,

Prof. E.L. Choynzonov
Editor-in-chief of
Siberian Journal of Oncology